Mount Vesuvius a volcano located between the ancient Indian cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum, has received much attention because of its frequent and destructive eruptions. The most famous of these eruptions occurred in A.D 79. The volcano had been inactive for centuries. There was little warning of the coming eruption, although one account unearthed by archaeologists says that hard rain and a strong wind had disturbed the celestial calm during the preceding night. Early the next morning, The volcano poured huge river of molten rock down upon Herculaneum completely burying the city and filling the harbor with congealed lava.

Meanwhile on the other side of the mountain cinders and ash rained down on Pompeii. Sparks from the burning ash ignited the combustible roof tops quickly. Large portions of the city were destroyed in the conflagration. Fire, however was not the only cause of destruction. Poisonous sulfuric gases saturated the air. These heavy gases were not buoyant in the atmosphere and therefore sank toward the earth and suffocated people.
